Kenley Russ is a E-Discovery Specialist at Lightfoot, Franklin and White.

Working closely within Lightfoot's e-discovery team, Kenley plays an integral role collaborating with our attorneys and clients, as well as opposing parties, to manage electronic information, records and other essential items from litigation groups and e-discovery vendors. Kenley thrives in the unique intersection of technology and law that the e-discovery landscape provides and is a key force in creating custom solutions for our clients and trial lawyers alike.

Prior to Lightfoot, Kenley worked as a cyber analyst specializing in digital forensics. By working closely with legal teams, providing crucial digital forensics support and testifying in court on findings derived from data analysis, Kenley strengthened her understanding of meticulous evidence handling and adherence to legal standards while sparking her interest in litigation.

Originally from Mobile, Kenley received her bachelor's degree in law and justice from Auburn University. Outside of work, she enjoys reading mystery novels and crocheting with her friends at Knit Bham.
